The Cows That Went to Common Market

BRUSSELS, Feb. 15 (Reuters),-Scores of young Belgian farmers barged into a European Common Market ministers' meeting here today. dragging three reluctant cows with them in a protest over farm prices.

Pained ministers looked on as secretarial staff members tried to clear cow dung from the green carpet of the cak-panelled conference

The demonstration came as Dr. Sicco Mansholt, vice-president of the EEC executive commission, was about to present proposed price increases for 1971-72, which community farmers organizations have already rejected as insufficient.

The demonstrators, members of the Young Farmers' Alliance, thrust community officials aside after a brief scuffle and dragged the cows into the room in the EEC congress palace. The demonstrators milled about chanting "Mansholt to the gallows," then withdrew after a few minutes.

Dr. Mansholt, the community's top farm expert, sat unmoved throughout the confusion but commented later: "After all, these things are to be expected. It is an agricultural ministers' niecting.

There was further chaos outside the chamber as the cows were led out. One of them, named Caroline, fell on the marble staircase and then refused to budge. Brussels firemen were called in to remove her, but just as they arrived she staggered to her feet and exited with dignity. Prench Agriculture Minister Michel Cointat, chairman of the meeting, commented: "It was very spectacular but not very effective. It was unworthy of the construction of Europe."

Belgian Minister Charles Heger said he could understand the feelings of "these misguided young people." but also deplored the demonstration as unworthy.

The young farmers distributed tracts demanding a minimum price increase for community produce of six percent and for further sutomatic rises pegged to the upward movement of the cost-of-living index.

OPTIMIST-Lord Fiske, chairman of Britain's Decimal Currency Board, gives the thumbs up sign to the press at the end of the first day of the decimal system.

After Thousand Years, Britain Goes Decimal

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON, Feb. 15 (NYT) .- For a thousand years the has been divided into $40 pence. Today it went decimal, Britain took the change much more easily than the experts had expected. Some castners complained about "bloody dreamils, but very few were so confused that long queues built up. The London subways, British Rail, the banks and the stock exchange all went decimal without difficulty. The only thing that worried them a little was that business was light, perhaps then, radiating the confidence of a man with the nondecumal enemy on the run, he added: "If I were a military commander, this is the stage where I would send in the cavalry."

The real threat of confusion probably has ahead-in the fact that the old currency will still be accepted in some places for the next 18 months. That is the transition period that has been fixed though it may be shortened if people simply stop using the old coins—as is possible.

The old currency, the most marvelously complicated in the world, divided the pound into by shillings and the shilling into 12 pence. With the pound at $2.40, that meant each English penny was worth exactly I American cent.

Now the pound is divided into 100 new pence, each worth 2.4 cents. Today three new copper come appeared to provide the small change. There is a two-penny piece, about the size of an American quarter, and a new printy similar to a U.S. cent. That is a big switch from the huge old copper printy. The average weight (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

Over 2 Million War Medals Awarded by U.S. in Vietnam WASHINGTON, Feb. 15 (Reuters).—The United States has awarded more than 2 million medals for acts of bravery in Vietnam-almost one for every servicemen who has been stationed there. Latest Defense Department statistics show the awards in-cluded 490,058 Bronze Stars, 40,000 more than were presented during World War II and more than ten times the number given during the Korean conflict. They also show the Air Medal is the most frequent award with 1,570,000 presented, 15 times the number given in Korea, but 900,000 fewer than presented during World War II. The statistics show that 2,143,364 medals for bravery have been awarded to U.S. servicemen in Vietnam. The number of Americans to have served there since 1961 totals 2.741.857.

No Purple Hearts The medals do not include Purple Hearts-awarded for wounds - nor citations for bravery. Critics have charged that the medals have been chespened by the number awarded, and at least two incidents have led to claims that the system of recommending presentations is frequently abused. Army Brig. Gen. Eugene Forrester was awarded the Silver Star just before he was transferred to another post. Later, it was learned the incidents in the citation of recommendation had been made up by soldiers acting on orders from a senior officer. The medal was revoked. On Nov. 20, the Army admitted that two dogs had been meritorious service in military operations against the enemy.

The dogs, identified as Griffin M. Cannine and Smokey M. Griffen, were included in a batch of men in the 25th Infantry Division recommended for the medal. One dog belonged to a sergeant major.

The Pentagon statistics cover the Medal of Honor—the highest award for bravery—the Distinguished Service Cross, the Air Force Cross, the Navy Cross, the Silver Star, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Bronze Star and the Air Medal. They show the Army, which has had more men serving in Vietnam, has awarded the most medals—1,273,987, compared to 1,766,546 in World War II and 50,256 in Korea. Next comes the Navy and Marine Corps with a combined total of 458,768 compared to only 201,854 in World War II and 41,709 in Korea. The Vietnam figures are inflated by the number of Air Medals awarded by the two services - 431,956 compared to only 132,923 in World War II

The Air Force figures are: number of Air Medals 410,617 in Vietnam, 1,306,274 during World War II, and 71,438 in Leftist Extremists Suspected

MILAN, Tenn., Feb. 15 (UPI).—Unless there is adverse public opinion, about three million blackbirds roosting at the U.S. Army arsenal here will be sprayed with an airplane spray that would freeze them to death within minutes. "We wanted to get public opinion before we took any action," said Maj. James I. Lowe, commander of the Milan installation. Dr. Fred M. Friedman, the arsenal physician, said: "They eat grain from farm fields, contaminate feed lots and public places He said the birds were not a real health hazard, however, although there was a potential threat of histoplasmosis, a fungus found in many blackbird roosts. Maj. Lowe said that the spraying of the hirds by airplane would serve two purposes. "First, it might partially alleviate the bird problem here by killing many of them," he said, "and secondly, it would be an experiment to test two different organic materials for their effectiveness in killing the birds." He said the arsenal had been a roosting site for three winters. The next step will be up to Army headquarters in Joliet, Ill.,

The plan to eradicate the birds involves spraying a chemical solution from a plane at night.

Paul Lefebvre, a bird specialist from the Department of the Interior, said the chemicals penetrate the feathers, causing rapid loss of body heat due to a loss of body oils.

Decimal Day Comes to Britain

Britain has gone over to decimal currency on the day the United States celebrated Washington's birthday. The reasoning goes this way: The revolution led by George Washington caused the first break in the British Empire away from the ancient system of pounds, shillings and pence; Canada followed with the decimal dollar; much later, India decimalized its currency; Australia and New Zealand adopted the dollar, and at long last the home of the pound sterling ceased to split that noble article of exchange into 240 parts (to say nothing of such subdivisions as shillings, florins and halfcrowns) and settled for 100 pence to the pound.

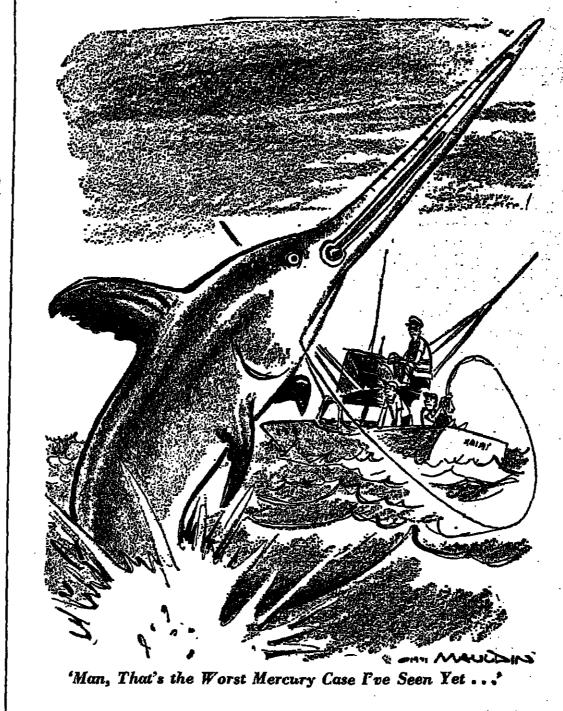

There are flaws in the argument, however. Washington's birthday has just become a highly arbitrary holiday, falling on a Monday to give a nice, long weekend, instead of on the actual date, February 22. In fact, one could add another note of confusion by pointing out that Washington himself thought he had been born on February 11-at least until he was 20, when the British, stubborn to the end, brought themselves in line with the rest of Christianity by putting the Gregorian calendar into effect.

Moreover, while the dollar was adopted as a monetary unit by the Continental Congress during the Revolution, it was the Spanish dollar of eight reals—the celebrated plece of eight. The dollar was not decimalized until 1792; for all of Washington's lifetime, and long after, Americans continued to reckon in shillings and pence as well as

By stretching things a good deal, it is dollars and cents, by force of habit. Indeed. possible to find significance in the fact that in New Hampshire the shilling remained the legal monetary unit until 1950. But New Hampshire delights in the retention of anachronisms: it was not until 1968 that it deprived its governor of the power to declare war independently of Congress.

Washington, in fact, fought his revolution with a bewildering surplus of monetary units and a grave shortage of hard currency. The states totted up their debts in shillings and pence whose value varied from state to state; a variety of foreign currencles-Dutch, French, Spanish-were in scant circulation. And Congress spoke of dollars, and eighths of dollars, and paid off in paper that made "not worth a Continental" a phrase that has not yet lost its bite (except for authors who poke fun at Washington's expense ac-

In any case, the silver pound, from which 240 silver pence could be struck, the most ancient system of currency in Europe, has vanished, except for the name, in the face of decimalization. After a period of confusion, it is doubtful whether many will regret its passing-certainly not those American tourists who tried to calculate percentages for tips in Britain. And now maybe the British will consider moving traffic by the right, instead of by the left. And perhaps they-and the Americans-will eventually change to the metric system. It should be enough for the English speaking peoples that so much of the world understands, and uses, their language. They cannot expect those who employ a much simpler method of calculating weights and measures to become entangled in feet and yards, pints and pounds.

Air War in Laos

Shortly before South Vietnamese troops invaded the Laotian panhandle backed by awesome American air power, a Laotian general in the area told a New York Times correspondent he did not want American aerial support. "Every time the Americans are called in to bomb, they destroy friends and not enemies," he said.

That is doubtless an exaggeration, as applied to the current zone of allied military operations in Laos. That zone is relatively sparsely settled and the targets of supporting American aerial assaults are predominantly military in the most literal sense.

But the limited nature of present air support does not negate the basic fear that underlay the Laotian general's comment. The Laotians, like their neighbors in Vietnam and Cambodia, have had long and bitter experience with American bombing. Hundreds of thousands of Laotians have been driven from their homes and untold numbers of civilians have been killed and maimed as a result of the extensive use of American air power against the North Vietnamese in longer subscribe. northeastern Laos in recent years. Villages

In recent months, the panhandle region has been subjected to repeated saturation raids by American B-52 bombers and carrierbased aircraft in what has been described as one of the heaviest air assaults of the Indochina war. These raids have not succeeded in their objective of blocking Communist supply routes to the south, as the current ground thrusts against the Ho Chi Minh Trail testify. But, because of their scope, their power and their lack of preciscope, their power and their lack of preci-sion, the air attacks inevitably do inflict a political settlement. But what harm and hardship on friend as well as foe. does that really mean? What harm and hardship on friend as well as foe.

The Soviet Five-Year Plan

Promises of jam at last for the long-suffering consumer in the new and much delayed Russian five-year plan will carry little conviction anywhere so long as economic over-extension in support of worldwide expansionist policies persists. That no relaxation is envisaged is clear from Russla's increasing military preponderance in Europe, her relentless escalation in the Middle East and her intransigent attitude in the missile talks with America.

This is confirmed in the new plan, which provides for a big expansion in heavy industry, although the rate of growth announced for consumer goods is supposed to be slightly faster, albeit on a narrow base. In the circumstances, these two aims are incompatible, especially as the Russian regime is becoming more illiberal in all respects.

Britain and Common Market

The don't knows are still by far the biggest group in Britain over the issue of the Common Market. They far outnumber both dedicated Europeans who want us in at almost any price, anti-marketeers who want us out at absolutely any price. . . Both Mr. Heath and Mr. Wilson have just reaffirmed their established line of wanting Britain to join provided the terms are right. There are, of course, nuances in the way they put this vital proviso. One feels that Mr. Wilson would not be at all sorry if, in the end, he were to land up in some vote-catching lobby of the anti-marketeers. Mr. Heath, on the other hand, was Mr. Europe long before he was prime minister and he is a man who sticks to his convictions.

The government's decision to grant the RB-211 engine a four-week stay of execution is sensible. An Assumption

A realistic analysis of the political possibilities should start with the assumption that, some day, Americans will have to stop fighting on that peninsula: not some but all not just ground troops but air force. Or so one must hope. It is not easy to believe that any President would base his Indochina policy on perpetual American fighting.

That assumption, if it is correct, sharply limits the political terms available to us. For even after two years of Vietnamization, and with extraordinary part of South Vietnam's population under arms, its forces are heavily dependent on American protection.

Thus Henry Brandon of the London Sunday Times, in a Washington report reflecting White Rouse thinking and doubtless that of Henry Kissinger specifically, takes an optimistic view of the Lace operation. But Brandon notes that American artillery, bombers South Vietnamese in Laos, and he case against the Catholic radicals arraigned here the other day on charges of conspiracy to kidnap White House aide and disrupt Washington's heating system. But and co-conspirators in the case leading officials involved are that he'd heard "three sex-starved behaving as though they were far nums" were after him. more concerned with highly symbolic political issues.

Take the behavior of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other law enforcement agencies. J. Edgar Hoover tattled about the govermment's case to a congressional committee long before indictments were handed down and his footprints are all over the case.

The original bail and travel restrictions seem to have been arranged to make it easy for the authorities to keep a continuing eye on the defendants. Security at the arraignment was so stiff even defendants and their lawyers had a tough time getting into the hearing. A telephone repairman called in to fix the line at the local office of the American Civil Liberties Union casually reported that it was out of order because of tepping.

Building Employee

Newsmen covering the case repeatedly found um-newsmenoking characters in their midst, going through the motions of the basic course in eavesdropping. I asked one who was bending an assiduous ear to my conversation with Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles Times what paper he worked for. "I work in the building," he said and moved on.

Then there is the example of the federal prosecutor, Guy Good-win, a confident well-tailored man with prematurely-gray good-looks. The other day a reporter for a local paper (and it has to be understood that Harrisburg is a folksy kind of place where the daughter of the judge in the case turns out to work for the local TV station) asked Mr. Goodwin how he should be addressed. "Your Eminence will do," Goodwin said.

Another nice example is the supposed victim of the kidnapping plot, Dr. Henry Kissinger.

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The gov- of history and the polynamicy of ernment may have a strong power in ways well calculated to generate compassion for himself and President Nixon. But he he thought it was a riotous toke to say of some of the co-defendants disturbing is that the trial of the Harrisburg Six has a deep symbolic meaning for two important public organizations. One is the Catholic peace movement led by Father Philip Berrigan, a co-defendant in the trial, and his brother, Father Daniel Berrigan, a co-conspirator. That movement is not, in any obvious way, the work of spoiled kids, or Communists, or radical chiesters or anybody else with selfserving purposes. It seems to be a pure moral protest—hence a supreme embarrassment to an administration that regularly wrans itself in piety. The nasty cracks made by Mr. Goodwin and Dr. Kissinger suggest that the administration is using the Harrisburg trial to discredit the Catholic peace workers as a bunch of violent nuts -something like the Weathermen. Then there is the FBI itself.

> Moral Protest What makes this crude behavior

Blabbing the story of the kidnap plot to the Congress did not exactly improve Mr. Hoover's reputation with serious people. The Bureau itself was made to look ridiculous when agents were unable to find Father Daniel Berrigan for months, though he was in touch with newsmen and friends. Stating that God does not play in universities. Not a few cases of draft-card-record destruction, which is the specialty of the Berrisans, remain unsolved. So it is plausible to see the FBI using the trial as a comeback vehicle—an occasion to accumulate a mountain of evidence that will make the Bureau look just great.

Perhaps these suspicions are unfair. The government does have an informant prepared to testify about the kidnep plot. It apparently has documentary evidence in the form of letters between Father Philip Berrigan and another codefendant, Sister Elizabeth Mc-This Allister. But if the case is so

The Laos Decision

Nixon as War President

By Joseph Alsop

WASHINGTON.-Victory has a hundred fathers. Defeat is a nameless brat. These ancient, very simple rules of political life are being proved on all sides, be-cause the South Vietnamene effort across the Laos border so far has gone well. So far, in fact, it promises remarkable results.

All the more reason, then, to un-derline the fact that this can only be described as the President's several years. personal enterprise, at least as far as Washington is concerned. General Creighton W. Abrams had of course long wished to cut the enemy's lifeline in Laos, like General And our ambassador in Saigon, Ellsworth Bunker, had always strongly concurred.

The origins of the very big decision about Laos, at least here in Washington, must be traced back as far as last November. By then, the pay-off of the great presi-dential gamble in Cambodia was beginning to be very big indeed. The President—the sort of poker player who backs a winning streak —therefore began to think about another stroke to put the enemy further off balance.

One must guess, although one cannot be sure, that the trend of Nixon's thinking was then communicated to Salgon. It must have been welcome news to General Abrams and Ambassador Bunker. The news was certainly welcome, too, by President Thieu and the Vietnamese general staff.

Laird's Visit

In Saigon, the American and Victnamese staffs prepared detail-ed plans during December. The plans centered on a pounce on the throat of the enemy's Laos trail-lifeline, with the Ehe Senh plateau as the takeoff point. Therefore the plans were ready, and the position in Saigon was firm and united, when the President sent Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird to South Vietnam to talk over next stens in January.

The plans made in Saigon were naturally the substance of Sec-retary Laird's subsequent report to the President. Yet much remained to be done. Most of the South Vietnamene strategic reserve had to be moved northwards, to join up with the ABVN First Division. A great engineering effort had to be organised, to repair the roads and establish the needed base-areas on the Khe Santi pla-

On that day the President held an enlarged meeting at the White House, mainly to hear what he subsequently described as the "sixtoon reasons against' what was being perpared He heard the "reasons against" at great length. A few, but they few, like the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Thomas Moorer, solely stressed the "two reasons for," as the President also put it later on. But the reasonersagainst may well have thought they had won the day when the meeting closed. If this was their impression, they could hardly have been more wrong. Bright and early the next morning, on Wednesday, February 3, the President quietly began is-suing all the necessary action-orders. It was then that the die was cast in deadly earnest. Up to now, the results have more than justified the President. Fo example, the Laos trail-lifeline of the North Vietnamese forces in the South has long been operated as a system of almost self-contained "boxes." Each box has its own hundreds of trucks, which shuttle back and forth by night, and hide in daytime. At the end of each "box," supplies, and troops, too, if they are being truck-moved, are handed over to the managers and trucks of the next box.

As these words are written, the South Victnamese advance guard has already passed Bouts 9, which is the road first called the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Already, in fact, they have occupied most of the "box" of the Lace trails that centers on the little town of Sepone. That means, in turn, that the enemy's unique lifeline has already been just about cut.

No one can foretell the force or character of Hanoi's inevitable counteraftack. But as of now. Richard M. Nixon is beginning to appear one of our better war presi-

A Tibetan tanka that sold for $316 at Hotel Drauot.

The Art Market

By Source Melikian

PARIS, Feb. 15.-Tibetan art sells well in Paris and London, and it sells well in an other-wise deteriorating market: that is the conclusion to be drawn from recent sales on both sides of the Channel.

In London, Sotheby's included several Tibetan objets d'art in a Feb. 1 saie. There were 11 tankas—the procession and temple banners painted on silk with Buddhist religious representations. The first lot included two of them, one with a fine mandala and another, depicting Buddha seated in heaven, was of unusually fine quality but rather badly worn out. The lot sold for $240. Next came a lot of two tankas, of a pleasing pattern and color scheme, if not outstanding beauty. At $100 I thought them cheap and so did, quite obviously, the German dealer who got them, trying hard to repress a broad grin.

After that, two tankss were auctioned, one showing Euddna seated with his hands folded in the gesture of teaching in the midst of seven other figures of Buddha. With subdued colors, like all Tibetan tankas in which dull blues, reds and browns pre lominate, it was a very beautiful work of art but not in good condition: $163 was the last bid. The highest price of the sale was $360 for a very fine piece but it was badly rubbed and showed some creasing-

The next three lots at $72, $96, $72, all bought by the same German dealer, were inexpensive. Yet it must be stressed that even these prices were not low pt the usual London salestoom standards. On the whole, it was a satisfactory sale from the auctioneer's standpoint.

Paris

The success of this Tibetan sale in London only confirms the trends established in Paris at Drouot, at two auctions conducted by Jean-Louis Picard with expert Guy Portier's assistance. A mandala of the deity Mahakala standing on a louis flower surrounded by an aura of shim-mering flowers made $316 at the first sale in December. A month later (Jan. 25) Tibetan bronzes did even better. They were part of a collection formed in the early 20s by a naval officer who had traveled extensively in the Far East. One lot fetched $337 and another reached ustrated in painting but far less frequently in bronze. This partly accounts for the price, but view of its late period-not stated in the catalogue—it is quite high.

In order to appreciate the significance of the prices, one should remember that the great Tibetan craze in France and England goes back to pre-World War I days when very large collections were formed. Prices were still high shortly after the war but did not recover from the depression. Until about 1965. In the carly '60s good tanks were still to be had for $30 or ,$30 at the lesser Drouot sales. The rise in prices was due to a combination of factors-among them the general upward trend in the late 1960s of all prices on the art market, and, above all, the upsurge of interest in Far Eastern metaphysical speculation and the symbols connected with it.

Thus, the rising prices for Tibetan art are unrelated to the usual criteria that boost prices, such as easy recognition by would-be investors. In fact, most Tibetan art is anything but readily identifiable. Dates are still very controversial. Quite often experts shy away from stating dates at all. Gu; Portier has a tongue-in-the-cheek way of saving that if Tibetan bronzes are refined in craftsmanship they are 18th century and if on the clumsy side they are 19th century. Paintings are just as difficult to identify.

Scholarship has not yet solved the major problems and has certainly not made tentative solutions accessible to the hoj polloj. Confusion of this kind is generally damaging from a commercial standpoint. Hence the long period of neglect. What makes the continuing recovery of Tibetan art all the more surprising is the general condition of the art market, which would appear to be weakening in almost all other categories. To discover the secret of this unexpected resistance to the general trend, one has to turn to the so-called "primitive" arts, the other class of objets d'art which, judging from Sotheby's latest sale, is going strong, in spite of occasional drops. Sotheby's auctioned some primitive works along with the Tibetan art. Many of the prices for the former seemed very high in relation to the estinetic qualities of the objects.

For example, a group of 14 small Daliomey brass figures and a bracelet of very recent make were knocked down at $132, about twice the price one would expect them to be sold for in the trade. A Bambara wood headdress, in the form of a stylized antelope with long horns, 33 3-8 inches long, reached $168. However popular this type of artifact from Black Africa may be the low quality of this particular specimen justifies one in calling the price definitely high.

Like tankas—from which they are esthetically worlds removed—the primitive arts were rediscovered recently, at least in commercial terms. In both categories there are difficult problems of classification. Both these fields are unfamiliar to with good training to find better bargains than in other types of art. It is difficult to outdo professionals on Impressionists because even a had picture from this category will sell. But, if you like tankas or primitive objets d'art and have more flair than money, it is still possible to make fine buys.

Neither Tibelan nor primitive art lends itself to speculation. And this is why, in my opinion, these two categories have been more than helding their own in a market in which speculative investment has never been so sluggish.

Freedom in Fashion

By Hebe Dorsey

ONDON, Feb. 15.—Landen is a liethed of fashion ideas. First it was the miniskirt and now the pop look, which is already breaking out all over the French scene.

Pcp fashions can be traced right back to Mr. Freedom (real name: Tommy Roberts), a hefty, flamboyant man who looks like a modern version of Henry VIII.

Air. Freedom started the whole pop madness 18 months ago, with just a star that he pinned dead center on a cheap T-

"Fun had seeped out of the clothing industry," he said with his strong cockney accent. London was on a serious trip. So I wanted to make a joke out

The "joke" prayed to be a meteoric success. Siz weeks ago, Mr. Freedom, who used to operate from a hole in the wall on King's Road, moved over to a huge establishment at 20 Kensington Church St.

The Setting

The place is dedicated to pop culture with a campy melange of ocelot settees, pinball ma-chines, death mask rings. Big Apple pillows, Kiss-Me-Quick T-shirts, salesgirls in hot pants, man-high papier-mache sur-realist roses, stars and stripes bathropes, Batman jumpsuits, wacky gadgets, cowboy posters. yellow walls, purple walls and Elvis Presley belting out "Hound Dog" on the jukebox. Nutty all right.

Nutty, that is, as far as the fashions go. But Mr. Freedom, whose eyes have a comping slant, knows exactly what he's doing and where he's going.

"I recken the young people won't take what they're told anymore." he said. "They anymore," he said. "They have their own minds. I think it's great that they can wear what they like without feeling silly. They don't bother about conforming these days. My customers appreciate the joke even if the joke is on them."

Pashion liberation is getting to be the big thing new, with lads really taking over from fashion, but it has been mis-handled in Prance, Mr. Freedom said.

"They've done the look in brown and belge," he said, instead of our strong, vital, primary colors. They've watered the look down and it's all wrong.

Contrived

It is true that the British know how to do completely tacky, basically vulgar clethes and have them come out right and funny. In Paris, designers tend to take the whole thing too seriously and their socalled fun clothes often end up looking contrived. Mr. Freedom has drawn not only young people from all walks of life but also celebrities such as Peter Sellers, Mick Jagger, Brigitte Bardot, Johnny Hallycay and Anthony Armstrong-Jones.

His comic-strip clothes are still selling well but Mr. Freedom is now trying to push another look. "I'm doing a naughty schoolgirl outfit." he said. "yes, a bit crotic. We're also going and one of his સામલેકાંડ. for more masculine, almost transvestite things for women."

All this is reflected in the

While he is at it, Mr. Freedom is also pushing pop furniture. He has a huge, round hed on which is sitting a menstrous women who could be Myra Breckinridge or the wife of Frankenstein. "It's just a crude pep statement," he said. He size made a fake fur settes that lanked like an enermous set

Music in England: When the Decibels Don't Count

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON. Feb. 15.-Ike and Tina Turner like to tell of a concert they gave in a New York hotel to a house of gentle iolk." As Tina remembers it, "I peeked through the curtain, and they all had hearing aids. When we played, they were turning them down "

At the Odeon Theatre in Hammersmith, where the Turners and their company played to two packed houses. Saturday evening, the audience was young and, presumably, blessed with normal hearing. But the fact that no one, as far as I could see, had recourse to ear plugs left one wondering what normal hearing is, these days, in those

It is only reasonable to remember, of course, that music has been grewing ever louder for a couple of centuries. Beethoven was taken to task for the noisy assertiveness of orchestra has nearly doubled in size since his time, and probmore than doubled in volume, with steel replacing catgut on the stringed instru-nearest exit. Electronic amplification hasn't changed the pattern, but it has accelerated the rise in what is accepted as a tolerable decibel count And the mischief, if mischief it is, has been compounded by the musical performer's anxiety that a moment's easing off, in a clamorous and competitive market, may lose him his audience's attention beyond recall. Not only the gain is higher. The pace is faster, the

Enterfajnment in New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—This is how critics for The New York Times rate new movies: "The Last Valley," directed by James Clavell with Michael Caine and Omar Sharif, is "a kind of historical movie, and something of a parable, and it winds up being a bit more bor-ing than is absolutely necesaccording to Vincent Canby in The Times. "Mr. Clavell, I suspect, sees the incredible horrors of the Thirty Years' War as a metaphor for contemporary horrors, but he seems either incapable of-or uninterested in-developing a physical drama with any kind of intellectual sub-structure." ## Art in Europe: The New Exhibitions in London, Madrid and Barcelona

LONDON

A show which has by no means received its due credit is that of Larry Poons's recent work at the Kasmin Gallery. Some critics have epined that Poous. an American, has only now discovered what Europe knew about ten and 15 years ago -but this is not to see beyond the thickly impasted surface of his paintings.

It is true that at first they would seem to be like the work of a Fautrier or an Averbach: but the extraordinarily subtle use of many colors in a very small area of very large canvases results in works different in impulse and feeling from those of the Europeans.

Inevitably, from its crenelated and relievo appearance the work can be compared to pictures of lunar surfaces or tropically colored landscapes seen from a plane at 30,800 feet. But this again is to read the paintings in too specific a way. These are not paintings of a particular object, but beautiful evocations of turned-on states of mind.

The rest of this week's offerings are figurative in their own particular ways. At Gimpal Fils is an exhibition of recent paintings by Donald Hamilton Fraser, who's fast becoming one of our senior figurative painters. Trained in the French manner, interested in Kandinsky (about whom he is writing a book), he is still clearly, though in the proper way, under the influence of Nicholas de Stael.

All his paintings are in the nameless tradition of the classical painter-landscape, figure composition, still life. The only danger is that he might, like so many of the good figurative painters of the Ecole de Paris, come close to paradying himself, in the best of good taste to be sure, but repeating himself

One cither has a great liking for the work of L.S. Lowry, or one dislikes it very much. I am of the former persuasion in certain respects though not necessarily for everything. His drawings are presently showing at the Lefevre Gallery. But the secret of the old master's success is to be seen not in the drawings but in the annex of oils, the earliest of which is a semi-naive, semi-academic but wholly professional work of "Street Singers" dating from

This annex contains a small anthology of some nine or ten oils (including the celebrated "A Late Caller"), ranging over more than 40 years. From these works one very clearly discerns the real power of this artisthis austere manner of conveying the lengliness and isolation of sea and sky; and the equal but different isolation of the individual in the crowd.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16 (WP).—Two U.S. economists suggested over the weekend that the government adopt an athinde of "genign neglect" toward its balance-of-payments problem.

In a paper prepared for the American Enterprise institute for Public Policy Besearch, Gott-fried Haberter of Harvard and Themas D. Willett of Carnell said that demissible policy considerations must come first for this country.

The professors said that a policy of "passivity" does not imply neglect of or lack of interest in, the problems of the international monetary system.

By they needled other countries which, despite differ bassing on the United States to set its house in order, match or even surpass the Grant program of inflation.

rate of inflation."

The Haberier-Willett thesis paralleled a 518gestion made lest menth by Lawrence B. Erause and sublished as one of the Breekings Institution papers on economic activity.

In simple terms, the "nasaive" theory holds that artificial centrols to diminish the balanceof-payments deficit are institucted by disripances and that existing controls should be disrigabled.
The other "active" approach to deficit problems

Aurid's reserve and intervention surrency. The object "active, appread to the deficit problems are charge in the falls of the deficit problems are charge charges to deficit problems. The two economists say that at the present time there is no basic conflict for the United States between domestic and international economic policy objectives: Both considerations necessitate a curbing of inflation.

But as the administration redirects its efforts toward centrolling unemployment, they say, such a conflict may arise.

"We feel strongly." they continue, "that when-

For balance-of-payments reasons, the United States should not accept more unemployment and more retardation of growth than may be necessary on domestic grounds to bring the price level under control." This rule, they argue, is really in the interest at the rest of the world, which has a stake in averting "a serious depression or recession in the United States. They suggest, as well, removal of barriers on trade and capital flows, and speed in dismantling controls on capital exports. "The removal of remaining sentrols in the face of a measured U.S. deficit would be a compageous act. they said, "for it would cut against conventional wisdom that is still widespread both at home and abroad. But the benefits of final, full recognition of the U.S. position in the international monetary would be engineers." system would be engrinous." Meanwhile, it was learned that the United States, in its next palence of payments report, will descriptionize the traditional "iquidity" basis as an inadequate indicator of the real situation.

The government will stress the "official reserve transactions" deficit (which will be about $10 billing for 1970) and a new consent taken a trends and separates out those considered temperature of the underlying trends and separates out those considered temperature. perary or volatile.

The Haberler-Willett paper agreed that liquidity deficit accounting had become "obsolete."
For 1978, it shawes a deficit of $4 billion an improvement from a deficit of $7 billion in 1989.
But according to the recent report of the Counell of Economic Advisers, it was distorted by special transactions and Eurodollar flows,

The weirdest system ever used in international competition was "Marmic," whose adherents were expected to pass with a very strong balanced hand in first or second position or following an opponent's opening.

South may have thought that his partner had adopted some such method on the diagramed deal: He found himself in a voluntarily bid slam with two high-card points when North had passed on the first round of the auction.

North had in fact carried to extremes a sound general principle: Pass with a strong hand when your right-hand opponent opens the bidding in a suit in which you have length and strength. His double on the second round after East-West had bid three suits implied a strong unbalanced hand with club strength.

The opening lead of the diamond queen was won in dummy with the king, and the heart king was led to West's ace. A trump return was won with the queen, and a spade ruff was followed by a low diamond ruff. When West failed to follow, South's faint hope of making more than two dismond tricks disappeared.

THE MERRY MONTH OF MAY By James Jones. Delacarte. 361 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

MAYBE a case can be made for James Jones's new novel, "The Merry Month of May." Oddly enough, despite its obvious flaws — the clumsy patches in its prose, its sexual exhibitionism, the flatness and predictability of its plot-oddly enough, one wants to make a case for it. Because there is a disarming quality to Mr. Jones's writing here, just as there is in all his novels—a lack of selfconsciousness, an almost naive enthusiasm and a willingess to take absurd risks. After all, what other writer would have dared to pin that ludicrous Oedipal finale on "Go to the Widow-Maker," Mr. Jones's last novel. ("All these guys. All over the world. It doesn't matter what they call it: Communism: Americanism; the Empire. They're small boys standing in the men's room watching their daddles . . . and knowing. . . their things will never be as big as Dad's.") Yet Mr. Jones dared, and there were grains of psychological truth in it, just as all of Mr. Jones's stories and characters, however crude, finally melt down to something of substance.

So I can image a case for "The Merry Month of May." Perhaps it is a tragedy of revolution—an attempt to mirror revolutionary upheavals in the unit of a bourgeois family, and vice versa. Perhaps its characters are frightened with symbolic content. I can imagine it. But let's sec. The people in Mr. Jones's new book include his narrator, one Jonathan James "Jack" Hartley, failed poet, failed novelist, recently divorced, but still a man of unquenchable literary bent" now living in Paris and editing a literary journal of the left; Jack's best friends, the Gallaghers - Harry Gallagher, an internationally famous screenwriter "often jokingly called Number Eleven of the Hollywood Ten;" his wife Louisa, "poor, dear, darling Louisa," sexually repressed descendant of an old, old Boston family; their son Hill, a cinema student at the Sorbonne dabbling in revolution; and their daughter Mc-Kenna, the issue of a last-ditch stand to save their shaky marriage; and the various and sundry of the Parisian American colony who gather nightly at the Gallaghers's sumptions "pad"; and Samentha Everton, a cynical 19-year-old Negro girl whose sport it is to seduce anything that moves, regardless of its gender.

The events of the story are basically two; the French revolution of May, 1968, commencing with the student strike led by Daniel Cohn-Bendit, and culminating in General đe Gaulle's pyrrhic restoration of order: and the dissolution of the Gallagher family into sexual deviation, generational strife and madness, with the amoral Samantha playing the part of catalyst. Disorder in the state mirrored by the collapse of the family, if you take the trouble to view it that way.

And if you do take the can dimly make out what Mr. Jones is up to with his interlocking accounts of these two upheavals. You can see Harry and Louise Gallagher-he with his overweaningly selfish maie ego ("She's basically a real woman, which means she's basically a masochist-type," says he of his wife, she with her Purisanical rigidity—as hypocritical liberals, bourgeois counter-revolutionary types. You can see Samantha the catalyst as the revolutionary wave of the future, sexually liberated, potentially polygamous, a member in good standing of the chimerical Third World. And you can feel at the book's end, if you're so inclined, that while the larger revolution has failed, the domestic one has gained something. And that there is a flicker of hope to be caught in the sound of "the thin, incredibly brave, plp-ing music" that Jack hears a few students making in the street. The future is in their hands—or something like that. But the difficulty with all this is that you have to think awfully hard about the book to see it that way-so hard that you begin to wonder if you aren't imposing another book on Mr. Jones's. For his flatly realistic style and cluttered, disorderly plot do not beg police. And against the wall epposite them is the Gallagher domestic snart. The connection between the two of them is a shuffling back and forth of various characters. The imagination is not invited to soar. Moreover, Mr. Jones's decision to employ Jack Hartley as his narrator has the effect of alienating the reader from both centers of action. Jack is a perpetual-motion go-between, but an outsider nonetheless. People are forever calling him up or inviting him over to see the latest development, or consulting him about their troubles. But he is hardly ever part of things. So Mr. Jones is

We are left with a few sharp vistas of the revolution in the streets, some well-focused anapshots of Paris, a little sex, and a good deal of masculine ritual the Hemingway tradition. But these assets are canceled out by several lifeless characters, too many overdetailed guided tows of Paris, and such laughable items as the title of Jack Hartley's only book. NEW YORK, Feb. 15 (AP) .-New old managers Billy Martin and Dick Williams and three controversial players—Denny McLain, Curt Flood and Rich Allen-are expected to be focal points during a spring-training season that begins tomorrov with the opening of the first haseball camps. The annual time-up grind for an early April opening of the major-league season starts to-morrow when the first contingents of the New York Mets and Kanses City Royals are expected to report. But it will be the weekend before any team is scheduled to have its full squad at camp. The reporting dates for the 17 teams that will be training in Florida and seven in California and Arizona run all the way to March 4, when the California Angels are expected to have their entire complement in camp. Both Martin, replacing Mayo Smith at Detroit, and Williams, taking over for John McNamara at Oakland, have designated Friday as the day to begin operations with their new clubs. Three other managers also will be at the helm from the start for the first time after having taken over during the 1970 season-Chuck Tanner with the Chicago White Sox, Bob Lemon with the Royals and Charlie Fox with the Giants.

The TV Blackout

WASHINGTON.—A week ago Sunday New Yor': City had a biackout which caused all nine television stations in the area to go out for several hours. This created tremendous crises in families all over the New York area and proved that TV plays a much greater role in people's lives than anyone can ima-gme. For example. when the TV went off in the Bufkins's house in Forest Hills, L.I., panic set First Bufkins thought it was his set in the living-room, so he rushed into his bedroom and turned on that set. Noth-

The phone rang, and Mrs. Bulkins heard her sister in Manhattan tell her that there was a blackout.

She hung up and said to her husband, "It isn't your set. Something's happened to the top of the Empire State Build-

Bufkins stopped and said, "Who are you?"

"I'm your wife. Edith." "Oh," Bufkins said. "Then I suppose those kids in there are mine." "That's right," Mrs. Bufkins said. "If you ever got out of that armchair in front of the TV set you'd know who we

"Boy, they've really grown." Bufkins said, looking at his son and daughter. "How old are "Thirteen and fourteen," Mrs. Bufkins replied.

"I'll be darned. Hi, kids."

"Who's he?" Bulkins's son, Henry, asked. "It's your father," Mrs. Buf-kins said.

"How?" asked Henry. 'Well, let's just talk," Bufkins said. "That's the best way to get to know each other."

"What do you want to talk about? Mary asked. "Well, for starters, what school

"How about that?" Bufkins said, very pleased, "You know, I hope they don't fix the anenna for another couple hours. There's nothing like a blackout for a man to really get to know his family."

"He thought it would be dandy for Atlantic City's hotel and boardwalk business to have a tropical flow on the doorstep. He was right all right. I mean, he became ambassador to France, didn't he?"

Man Who Moved the Gulf Stream

By William A. Krauss PARIS—In this town there must still be a few ranking old gentlemen—French and American-who remember Walter Evans Edge, U.S. ambassador to France.

A modest slice of immortality is his the dates of his stewardship as Hoover's Man in Paris are imperishably recorded in brass on the left wall of the American Embassy lobby in the Avenue Gabriel. Walter E. Edge 1929-1933, it says. Just the stark statement of dates, naturally.

No reference at all to the Gulf Stream. Yet it was this Ambassador Edge who deliberately interfered with the Gulf Stream, would have altered its whole course, if he'd had his way, with heaven knows what dire consequences for Western Europe. Ice ten feet thick all over Ireland? Glaciers in Brittany, permanent frost in Portugal? Some major climatic catastrophe like these was just what Mr. Walter Edge talked a lot of people into accepting. Or so an old gentleman told me.

I was staring up at this ambassador listing on the embassy wall the other day while waiting around for the American minister to get off the telephone and come eat a gourmet hmch with me; and this beautifully dressed senior citizen. sidling up, nudged me and croaked, "Tve known 'em all. Known 'em all since Willy Sharp. Wallace and Herrick and Straus and especially old Walter Edge. Old Walt, I was a buddy of Walt's, he loved oysters. Me too. He's the man that moved the Gulf Stream, you know." "I don't know." I said. "Sit down. Sit here-" pointing to the comfortless unbacked bench provided by our government. "I have a few minutes and vou tantalize me. How did the ambassador move the Gulf Stream? Who says 90? Wasn't that serious? Didn't the Norwegians protest? What about the Brit-

"Edge didn't even ask 'em. He didn't ask anybody. Serious? You can bet your astrakhan hat and coat it was serious. There'd have been woolly mammoths slithering all over Bath and Biarritz if Edge'd had his way-."

Beginning

"Tell me from the beginning," I said. "The beginning's in New Jersey," he said. "Walter Edge moved the Gulf Stream because he thought it would be dandy for Atlantic City's hotel and board-walk business to have a tropical flow on the doorstep. He was right all right, I mean, he became ambassador to France, didn't he? But the real measure of his success is that now, all these years later, people are still suckered. Even today if a spell of warm weather blossoms in winter along the U.S. East Coast, if a daffodil blushes unseasonably between Hatterns and Maine, then a flock of earnest subscribers write to the Daily News saying, Look at the evidence, sure and the Gulf Stream's swung in closer than it used to flow'. Power of suggestion, and the suggestion was Edge's.

"What was in it for Edge?" I asked. "He did it for the glory of his advertising agency. He was sole prop. and copy-writer of a one-horse agency in Atlantic City, handling the accounts of the local hotels. Ris job was to run competition with Florida and make Atlantic City a year-round resort. To this end, he planted stories and wrote subtle science-fiction ads to convince the public that the Gulf Stream was drifting west. Oh, subtly. Inch by inch. Day by day. Shifting inexorably and incluctably westward toward the Jersey shore, homing in smack on Atlantic City, practically under the smouldering boardwalk."

. . as ambassador.

"Ah," I said.

"Ah, indeed. Consider the far-reaching consequences. Edge's skulduggery rammed the stream right into Newfoundland! Bent it all whichways. Palm trees in Boston. But of course the big beneficiary was Mr. Edge's gilt-edged client, Atlantic

"Too Bad"

He grinned then and he said, "Too bad for poor old Ireland, of course. Too bad for Devonshire and San Sebastian. Tough titubation for all those people. Still, the ambassador-to-be had no agency accounts on the European shore, tant pis. And so during snowstorms and even blizzards he plastered the metropolitan dailies with 'No Snow on the Boardwalk' ads even if he had to sweep it off himself before placing the copy."

I said. "I had a great-aunt who loved Atlantic City in winter."
"You can trace it to Ambassador Edge.
He moved the Gulf Stream and your great-aunt loved it. Everybody loved it, so he became governor of New Jersey, senator from New Jersey, and ambassador right here in Paris. He confessed the whole story himself, at the end, in his book called 'A Jerseyman's Journal,' published in '48 by Princeton University Press. Ever read it?"

"Not me," I said. "Well, the moral seems to be, if you want to climb the ladder of success, make it big and tell it often."

PEOPLE:

1970 when Thurston and Barbara Egbert ventured forth from their compound in nearby Cha-ville to break bread with several friends in Greater Meudon.

Over after-dinner cognac, Thurston had got the better of his host in an argument of sufficient moment as to cause said host to step outside to cool off.

While moomphing about the premises, the host chanced upon the Egberts' convertible Vroom parked under a used chestnut tree. The urge was overpowering. In a trice of vindictiveness, he seized upon two uncommonly spiky chestnut pods, placed them in the center of the driver's seat, and smirking in sophomoric satisfaction, -rejoin-

No word was forthcoming from the Egberts until several nights ago, when the visit was repaid. The traditional post-prandial bickering recalled to the Meudonnois his October peccadillo, and in explation, the foul deed was confessed. Thurston was singularly unimpressed. "I never felt a thing." he insisted, to the undisguised chagrin of the culprit. "Maybe I was a little gassed?" "That's right," corroborated wife Barbara, "you never felt a thing."

"How do you know," demanded

Thurston, who sometimes gets like that "I know." said Barbara, "because I drove home."

In Britain yesterday, every-body was talking about Decimal

Day but nobody was doing anything about it, with the exception of one David Shilling.

On the grounds that the shilling is now officially obsolete, David, a 22-year-old London insurance broker, born on the 27th of June, began legal proceedings to have his name changed to 276.

Asked whether his new handle might not prove rather combersome, David said, "Perhaps, but I hope my friends will just call me Two."
